

Statutory declaration for evidencing skills maintenance

Note: This statutory declaration is to be completed by the worker's employer, supervisor, or the applicant who is self-employed and does not have an employer or supervisor.

The Electrical Safety Regulator is responsible for issuing electrical work licences to suitably trained and competent persons to carry out electrical work.

The holder of an electrical licence must be able to demonstrate ongoing skills and competence without supervision and carry out electrical work compliant with the Australian Standard AS3000 and relevant legislation.

The provision of a statutory declaration from the self-employed applicant's employer or supervisor detailing the applicant's areas of work is a method of evidencing skills maintenance, acceptable to the Regulator. It should be noted that in this case the self-employed applicant, employer or supervisor would have to be the holder of an electrical work licence of at least equivalent level to the applicant.

To use this method the statutory declaration attached to this page, is to be used. The employer or supervisor should list the type and quantity of work performed by the applicant over the recent preceding period of the licence. Should the applicant have worked for other employers' then statutory declarations from them, or references detailing the work, would need to be lodged as well. An audit of the listed experience may also be performed if there is any doubt as to the veracity of the evidence provided or the continued skills maintenance or competency of the applicant.

Please attach separate additional pages, if required. The person making the declaration and the witness are required to sign any additional attachments. Please clearly refer to attachments in the made declaration, should you use them.
